Not illustrated. 1819 Excerpt: ...sailed from the harbour of Tripoli on the 20th of this month, as ambassador to Sweden and England. From the state Tripoli is in, sinking under plague and famine, the departure of the ambassador from his handsome Greek, Amnani, and her children was dreadful. He made up his mind to see but few of them again, arid with reason: the dire infection had entered his walls, nor was it to be imagined that even his own suite could embark untainted with the VOL. I. N 178 Abderrahman's Melancholy same. If he is so fortunate as not to fall a victim to the plague before he reaches Malta, he will perform there a heavy quarantine pf ninety days at least. They perceived before they quitted the harbour, one of his people, a Jew broker, severely attacked with the plague; and they put him onshore before they sailed. Abderrahman is so much beloved, that the people in general participate in his sufferings, and the screams for the calamity of his family, which began before he sailed from the harbour of Tripoli, have continued to the present moment, and are still augmenting from increasing deaths. At this awful period, the care of Lilla Amnani, his wife, and his favourite eldest daughter, devolves on his brother Hadgi Mahmute, who is dying in torments unheard of, from the singular instance of the plague having at first seized him in his mouth, producing violent tumours, by which he is now starving: he is at times so raving that many people are required to secure him. Though none of his family were ill when his brother sailed for Europe, his wife and children (one already buried), with many more relations of Abderrahman's family, are dying very fast. Lilla Amnani, Abderrahman's daugh ter, and his niece, are all the ladies that remain of his family. Of his slaves and attendants only ...
